

Abstract of WO2004009883

The invention relates to a method for melt-spinning polyester microfilaments having a maximum dtex of 0.7 and to microfilaments that can be produced according to this method. According to the invention, the filaments, according to their titer, are spun from a melt with a solution viscosity lower than that of the prior art.